LETTERS OF JAMES MONROE.

Part 3, 1809.

A continuation of the selections printed in the Bulletin for February, 1900, and September, 1901.

[To George Hay.]

Albemarle, Nov^r. 30, 1809.

My dear Sir

Having to meet my brothers in Caroline, & some business of consequence to adjust there & in Fredericksbg., concerning the estate of the late M^r. Jones, before I proceed to Loudoun, I shall leave this tomorrow in pursuit of those objects. I expect to be in Fred^bg. on the 6^th. or 7^th. & in Loudoun on the 10^th. Should you have occasion to write me, you will be so good as to address your letters to the above places at those dates.

A neighbor of mine called today & after some conversation on ordinary topicks observed, how much the death of M^r. Lewis was to be regretted on account of his merits, & the publick loss, in the office vacated by it. I reciprocated the sentiment. He then reminded me of a former conversation in w^h. he had expressed a desire to see me plac'd in some station, which I might hold with honor to myself & advantage to the publick, & immediately observed that altho' the climate might be a good objection to New Orleans, it was one which did not apply to the upper gov^t., now vacant by the late lamentable incident: that the republicans in general wished to see me employed, and if, I would only make a beginning, that I might calculate on remaining through life, on honorable conditions, in the publick service. Being much surprised and indeed hurt at such an intimation, I was somewhat embarrassed how to answer it, in terms which sho^d. do justice to my own, without wounding, his feelings. I remarked that with respect to the place alluded to, I would not allow myself to think even a moment of it. that is was utterly incompatable with my ideas of my publick & private duties, to let it be inferr'd that I did think a moment of it. that I had the welfare of my country much at heart, & wished success to the adm^n., with which the publick welfare was closely connected. that I sho^d. not be backward to serve my country when my service was sought by it, & I might render it with honor. that should such an occasion offer, which I hoped would not be the case, I would find such a place in the crowd as would be acceptable to the publick, & equally so to me. He repeated his desire to see me employed, & seemed to use it as a reason why I sho^{d}. accept the office alluded to, that at present there was no other opening in the civil line. I replied that an opportunity had been presented to M^{r}. Madison when he came into office, to avail himself of my services, & to have displayed some magnanimity in doing it. that there was but one proposition which he could have made to me, or I have accepted, which was to have invited me into the cabinet in the place next to his own, being that which he had lately held. that he had lost that opportunity. that I was not disposed to put myself in the hands of those under whom I should now have to act. He replied that that was an objection which would apply to every trust under the gov^{t}., that in some I sho' be accountable to the department of state, and in others to that of war; though he did not know that a military appointment would be agreeable to me. Supposing that he alluded to a vacancy which might be created by the removal of a certain person, I replied that as to being the mere successor of W. (speaking of the station merely as an office without reference to a crisis) I had no such desire. He seemed to be struck at the term successor and said something which induc'd me to infer, that his removal was not thought of, & that if I was willing to act in that line, some secondary station only, could be offerd to me. Letting it be seen that I had made that inference, I added that, as to acting under him, that was the last act of degradation to which I would subject myself; that I should as soon think of being shot on the plane beyond my house, as of putting myself under him. I observed that he sho^{d}. not infer from what I had said, that I wo^{d}. refuse to serve my country unless it was in a certain grade; that with the publick I should insist on no such condition, being willing to accept the office of magistrate on the country bench, but that if I came into any station under the gov^{t}., it should be in one, from which I would look to the nation, & it to me; in which case I should not care with whom I corresponded in the government, intimating that as I should be on the ground, I could take care of myself. This is the substance of our conversation on this topick, which ended amicably. To the remark which I made relative to the opportunity which M^{r}. Madison had possessed of availing the publick & himself of my services, he made no reply; nor did he speak of him at all as being acquainted with or instrumental to the conversation; tho' I have no doubt that they had communicated on the subject. It was always doubtful with me whether the story which we had heard of a disposition, in the incumbent to employ me in a certain station, and of his being overruled in it by certain persons was not in reality a fabrication, tho' in the mere form something of the kind may have taken place, to which policy in the one party (as the lesser evil) & vanity in the other, may have produced from both, a sanction. I am equally confident that they wish to employ me, but in plans only of the kind alluded to; in none where I sho^{d}. take a lead, and my experience & information in our great concerns, be brought into activity. I communicate to you the above in the strictest confidence, to be imparted to no person on earth, except our daughter. The conversation between this gentleman & I was confidential, good faith forbids me to betray it. If hereafter it sho^{d}. be intimated that offers of employment had been refused by me, you will hear of it, & put it in my power to refute the charge. I do not think that the publick can expect of me, at this time of life, & after such long & faithful service, to accept an office which I certainly have refused at the age of 23. I am in truth far from desiring publick employment, but if it were otherwise, I have too high a sense of what I owe to my own reputation, to do it on the terms so frequently offered, that is by accepting under the govt., a station which wod. degrade me, in the hope (I presume that must be the idea) that after being kindly taken into favor, & obtaining a beginning, I may get forward again to other plans.

The late meeting at Richmond has plac'd me on the ground on which I wish to stand. It is well known to the publick by many facts, that the admn. pursued a course in our publick concerns, which differed from that wh. I shod. have pursued. The policy of the two systems is yet to be tested by time. So far the difference has worked in its favor against me, by circumstances wh. could not fail to produce that effect, & therefore ought to impute nothing unfavorable to the publick for inclining on that side. The collision plac'd me necessarily, in a new relation, or degree of approximation, to the British govt. & the federalists, which while the contest lasted between the govts., rallied on the side of our govt., & in favor of Mr. Madison's pretensions, the great majority of the republican party. I anticipated this before I returned home, and intimated it as I think you will recollect in our first conversations. My course was taken on reflection & I do not regret it. The occurrence of the late meeting does not identify me with the admn. Facts & the knowledge of them remain as they were before. It arraigns me however with the great mass of the republican party, & seperates me in like degree from the late strange & unnatural association; whereby it deprives my opponents of a powerful weapon to annoy me with. I am no enemy to that portion of the republican party which supports the admn., as it will see (I mean the deluded part of it) by this late occurrence. It must therefore now regard me, through the medium of my past services, & the evidence which they afford of my principles. To give full effect to those circumstances, my friends who have lately been active in my behalf, shod. be careful to keep me on their part, as much out of view as possible. That portion of the republicans who have injured me, will not be conscious of it, or relent, while they are reproached with it, and their passions are excited. I have given you the above information & these remarks on the facts it details, before I set out, and while they are fresh in my mind. Our best wishes attend you all.

Your friend & servant

Jas. Monroe.
